I am one of many who feel like today's meeting was a clear manipulation to pass an agenda quietly at the 11th hour.

Costs are never reduced by refusing treatment needs. And these services are not optional for most people... but not having them as an option will certainly complicate and exacerbate the situation.

As an educated, married white male with children who goes to church regularly, you'd probably think I don't fit the demographic of those who would oppose this thinly veiled discrimination, but I do, and I know many others who do, and I will be one of many who broadcasts these types of dealings, and recruit what support we can to oppose such disgusting behavior.
